

MOST WIDESPREAD BOMBARDMENTS IN HISTORY OF AERIAL WARFARE CLIMAXED BY A DAYLIGHT ATTACK ON ROME; FOLLOWS NIGHT ASSAULTS ON MILAN, TURIN AND BERLIN

Second Bombardment of Rome is Sharp Warning That Alternative to Peace is Devastation—Religious and Historic Buildings Protected — Communication Lines and Airfields in France Also Smashed.

LONDON, Aug. 13—(INS)—The most widespread bombardments in the history of aerial warfare were climaxed today with a second daylight attack on Rome which followed devastating night assaults on Milan and Turin and a sweep by speedy British bombers over Berlin. Rome—Bombarded for the second time in its history in a sharp new warning that the alternative to peace is devastation. Large formations of heavy and medium bombers led by Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle, hero of the Tokyo raid, blasted railway lines and installations, again protecting religious and historic buildings.

Berlin—British bombers raided Berlin and smashed communication lines and airfields controlled by the Nazis in France and the low countries, coincident with a flood of reports that many administrative departments of the Nazi regime are being moved from the German capital to Vienna and other more distant cities.

Turin—Assaulted by gigantic waves of Allied bombers as part of the greatest aerial assault of the war against northern Italy. The Italian high command admitted "very heavy damage."

Milan—Plastered mercilessly by huge raiding forces which dropped such devastating bomb loads that watchers in Switzerland reported feeling the vibration of bomb blasts and witnessing great sheets of fire that rose into the sky above the city.

Stalin Not Invited To Conference in Canada

QUEBEC, Que., Aug. 13—(INS)—The Russian announcement that Premier Joseph Stalin had not been invited to the military conferences between President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill appeared today to cast a new light on the forthcoming discussions. To informed international observers, the announcement had only one significance—that Stalin wished to serve notice on the Allied world that he had not failed to appear for the conferences as a result of his own initiative.

Only three days ago in Washington, President Roosevelt had told his news conference that Stalin's absence from the Quebec discussions did not mean that he and Churchill would not have been happy to welcome him.

The announcement, carried by the official Russian news agency, represented the latest in a series of events which have given concern in high places that the Russian Premier may have decided to lead his nation on its individual path, both during the war and in the establishment of the peace to follow.

Last week, the official Russian newspaper "Pravda" had reiterated Stalin's demand for a full-fledged second front in Europe which would be satisfactory only when one-fourth to one-third of Germany's military strength had been diverted from the Russo-German fighting front.

Meanwhile, the beginning of formal discussions between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill were expected to take place in Quebec for the next several days. Military staffs of Great Britain and the United States are now holding preliminary discussions at the Chateau Frontenac, and time must be given them to formulate military and naval strategy for submission to the two nations' high commands.

Following the precedent set at previous meetings, it is understood that the British and United States military and naval high commands are meeting jointly to work out the strategy of attack to be employed in this global war.

It is only later that the highest ranking officials of the two United Nations join in the discussions to revise or approve the military moves that undoubtedly will make headlines and history in the months to come.

If these differences between Russia on the one hand and Britain and the United States on the other do exist, it is certain that they will come under microscopic examination in the course of the pending talks. And should these differences be resolved to the mutual satisfaction of all concerned, it is probable that the agreement will remain as another secret of the war—at least until peace has once more been established.

Americans Advance Near Cape Orlando

Allied Headquarters in North Africa—America's Seventh Army advanced eight miles today into the breached German defenses protecting the Cape Orlando bastion on the northern coast of Sicily.

The American troops, amidst the confusion of their second landing behind enemy lines, hurled the Nazis back across the Naso river and joined hands with the landing party, occupying the coastal town of Brolo. Despite the German's alertness, the landing practically shattered the whole German defense line along the road to Randazzo, where the enemy now is facing the alternative of withdrawing to avoid being outflanked.

"Head" of Oil to Reach Phoenixville Today

Linden—Oil from the West was well on its way to this eastern terminal of the big inch pipeline following the report that the "head" of the first blow was due to reach Phoenixville, Pa., some time this afternoon. The remaining distance which the oil must travel on its 1,253 mile journey to this eastern outlet will take another two days, engineers estimated.

Claim Japan Preparing for New Offensives in China

Chungking—A Chinese army spokesman declared today that Japan is preparing important new military offensives in China in the near future. As indications that the present lull in the fighting will be broken soon, the spokesman cited Japanese reinforcements of their aerial forces in central China, the enlarging of airfields, the storing of gasoline and other similar measures.

All of the offensives, the spokesman declared, would be aimed at tightening the enemy's blockade of China and wiping out bases from which the Chinese have been harassing Japanese outposts.

Two Quakertown soldiers are missing in action, according to messages received by their parents from the War Department.

They are 2nd Lt. Harry Swartz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Swartz, S. 11th street, and Staff Sgt. James E. Heist, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Heist, Sr., S. Ambler street.

Lt. Swartz has been missing since July 16th, during the Munda battle on New Georgia Island. Heist, who was an aerial gunner, has not been heard from since he made a flight in a Flying Fortress on July 25th over Hamburg.

Swartz was graduated from Quakertown high school in 1937. He began his duties with the Infantry on March 11, 1941, and received his officer's training at Fort Benning, Ga. He left for overseas duty late in December, 1942.

Heist, who attended Quakertown high school, enlisted in May, 1941, and left for overseas duty last May.

Roundups of the 4-H home economics projects will be in the form of exhibits at community stores this year. Mrs. Katherine G. Moon, Bucks county home economics extension representative, announced.

MARRIAGE LICENSES TAKE A GREAT DROP

20% Fewer Licenses Issued This July Than Year Ago

77 DURING THE MONTH

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 13—A great drop was seen in the marriage license business during the month of July as compared to July of 1942, according to the deputy clerk of Orphans' Court, Joseph B. Keating.

Only 77 couples sought licenses here to wed during that period of time. The number of marriage licenses issued this year in July was 29 per cent less than the number issued in July, 1942, and an even greater drop from the June, 1943, total of 196 although this was 79 less than the number issued in June, 1942.

One Man's Opinion

By Walter Kiernan (I. N. S. Staff Writer)

Well, the Normandie is afloat again and if nobody throws a match and the money doesn't run out she'll be worth twice her weight in pickled herring.

She may cost us fifty million dollars and that's a lot of green waves to float the barnacles off a second-hand car with busted fenders and no windshield.

When the Navy got her she was named Normandie. They renamed her Lafayette. Ten minutes later they looked around and said "Lafayette—we are here but where are you?"

They never identified the workman who flipped the match that set the fire that brought the water that sank the Normandie but we know who he was.

He was a descendant of the fellow who tended Mrs. O'Leary's cow. We have examined all the reasons for raising the Normandie and have eliminated all but one. They want to see what's under her. Thought for the day: Anybody wanna buy a fireproof canoe?

Hopes of Gasoline Increase "Premature"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13—(INS)—Indications mounted today that hopes of east coast motorists for any appreciable increase in their gasoline ration in the immediate future may be premature.

Although a one gallon reduction in coupon values was reported for the mid-western area, there was no assurance that the East would benefit correspondingly.

The eastern pleasure driving band appeared due for the scrap heap, especially in view of the refusal of many boards to attempt further enforcement of the edict, but car owners along the Atlantic seaboard may receive but a slight increase in the present values of their coupons—one and a half gallons on B's and A's and two and a half on A's and C's.

Reports circulated that OPA already has received its allocation of gasoline for civilian motorists from the Petroleum Administration and was disappointed at the size of the increase over previous eastern supplies. The agency has been under considerable pressure from eastern congressmen to ease up on the East.

However, some sources reported that PAW boosted the allotment of gasoline for the entire east coast by only 19 per cent. This would mean only a 32,800 barrel increase over the current daily allocation of 328,000 barrels.

Petroleum Administrator Ickes said that eastern gasoline stocks dropped 500,000 barrels last week, explaining that August deliveries to the Atlantic seaboard are "running way behind" because of the hurricane that struck Texas refineries recently. He added that this was a "temporary" condition.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1943

FASTER THAN SOUND

To the average American who at some time or other has driven his car eighty miles an hour and considered it plenty fast enough, the feat of an American test pilot in England in power-diving more than 780 miles an hour must seem almost incredible.

Yet Lieut. Col. Cass S. Hough of Plymouth, Michigan, technical director of the Eighth Fighter Command, has reached that terrific velocity in a plane not once but twice. He did it in September, 1942, in a P-38 Lightning and again in February of this year in a P-47 Thunderbolt. Both are fighter planes.

Both of Colonel Hough's tremendous dives were undertaken voluntarily to obtain scientific information for the aid of fighter pilots. In each case he took the plane up about eight miles in the air and put it into a vertical dive of almost five miles. For his feat he has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross.

It is particularly satisfying to Americans to learn that not only can American fighter planes withstand the frightful strain of such phenomenal speed but that American pilots also can stand up under such punishment. Colonel Hough's performance adds another spectacular chapter to the already star-studded history of American aviation.

EGG SHORTAGE

An egg shortage, although not of alarming proportions, is looming for the East this Fall, and most authorities are agreed that rationing would be difficult if not impossible.

Reasons for the prospective shortage are that production customarily drops off in the Fall, the armed forces and lend-lease are taking a bigger share, eggs are a meat substitute competing with other scarce food, and all over America people who formerly could not afford eggs in unlimited quantities have had their incomes boosted, with the result that they are buying more eggs.

There is a great demand for eggs in the Middle West to which the East has looked for most of its supply. California, a great egg exporting state, will send few eggs east because of the increased demand in that state.

The War Food Administration has made a tentative allotment of 338 eggs per capita during the year which began July 1. Demand is estimated at more than 400 per capita, and in this situation the East, which is farthest from the main sources of supply, will be first to feel the pinch.

Rationing would be extremely difficult because huge quantities of eggs move directly from the farmer to the consumer without intermediate handling. Putting impediments in the way of these sales would be a big task.

Since virtually all requests for persons not to travel on July 4 were ignored, transportation companies might as well be getting ready for the Labor Day rush.

It will be observed that the President did not address them as "Dear Hank" and "Dear Jess."

The Crimson Thread by LILIAN LAUFERTY

SYNOPSIS

Hilda Glenn, who was to become a headline in the Havenhurst-on-Sound reign-of-terror, has told how she became a composer of "soap opera" through her undeclared love for Greg Mason, a radio executive. Hilda lives with her younger sister, Peggy, and her great-aunt, Caroline Babcock, in New York City. They had rented Glennacres, their Havenhurst-on-Sound home, to others after an auto accident in which Hilda's parents were killed. . . . Mason has accepted Hilda's "Love's Wages," and said he had "just the right girl" to play the heroine's role, Pam Drury. "She's black velvet magic," Greg stressed. He offered Hilda "two fifty per" and she gasped: "Per what?"

CHAPTER TWO

Greg laughed. "Not per script, Madam. Shylock. One of the biggest agencies pays its writers a hundred and a quarter per week for five fifteen-minute scripts. So you listen to me, Hilda; when I offer you two fifty a week, I'm playing fair with everybody but the client, but don't you ever tell him that."

"Is it—all settled?" I asked. (Now Peggy would go to college whether she liked it or not.)

Greg laughed. "You've written some darn good stuff. After the director goes over the scripts a bit, they'll play like a home afire. Ransome Products needs a show for Glitterwhite Tooth Paste and I've been scouting for the right one for weeks. So you've walked into a perfect setup."

I didn't know what a word of it meant. I didn't even know till later that Greg was head of the radio department at Storrs and Weymouth.

In due time I also discovered that Ransome Products was one of the biggest accounts in the agency. They had about a dozen of their "products" on the air and Glitterwhite Tooth Paste was a new one, all set for an advertising campaign. I had marched in with Love's Wages at a very psychological moment.

So there it was. Two hundred and fifty dollars a week for me the first year Love's Wages was on the air. A contract that "upped" a hundred dollars a week for every subsequent year the show was broadcast.

Success! Fabulous success! And the chance to work with Greg Mason. To see him every day. What I'd wanted. What I'd dreamed!

We didn't know it, but we were setting in motion a train of circumstances that was to go smashing off the track. I should have said good-bye to Greg that day.

Instead I made an appointment to come to the office. Monday, to meet the Storrs and Weymouth account executive for Ransome Products and the sponsors. As it turned out, only one of them was there. But that was enough. It was the advertising manager in charge of Glitterwhite Tooth Paste. He was a tall, broad-shouldered, very delicate young man with gray eyes and stubborn brown hair that insisted on curling in spite of all the plastering down Ransome Products' own "Smoothhair" had tried to accomplish. Greg said: "Miss Glenn, this is our client, Mr. Dennis Riordan."

Remember the name.

When Love's Wages was heading toward its fourth year on the air I made a grave blunder. At the time it seemed a very wise move. I told Peggy and Aunt Carrie my plan at dinner.

"The lease on Glennacres is up the first of May," I said.

Aunt Carrie is somewhat deaf but shrewd. "Don't the Harpers want to renew?"

"Their name is Carter and I don't want to renew!" I said it just like that. Offhand but with a sweeping gesture. Hilda Glenn has made good and her lovely young sister and plump old matronarch of a great-aunt shall share the fruit of her labors.

But the aunt was practical. "You certainly don't want Glennacres standing idle. You can't afford that."

"It won't stand idle. It's going to be very busy with assorted Glens and one Great-aunt Caroline Babcock."

"How simply marvelous!" Peggy said. "Wait till I tell the girls at school about our opening the old homestead. Will they line up for week-end bids to Havenhurst-on-Sound?"

"But that big place! I'm too old to be much good at running it." Aunt Carrie added practically: "And, Hilda darling, can you afford it?"

"We can't afford not to go back home." How sure I was. How sure

I had enough confidence in Greg's interest to call him up and tell him all about it the morning after I made my fateful decision. That was natural enough; he was my boss and we'd been neighbors at Havenhurst.

Greg's sister, Nancy Everard, lived in the old Mason place now and he had always adored Nancy, so the romantic setup looked ideal.

Greg said he'd meet me at Sibboney's for lunch after the broadcast and talk things over. He hadn't taken me to lunch since the long ago day when he sat across the table at Anatole's and said he was going to buy my show. This looked like a propitious beginning; a good omen if you believe in signs, which I don't.

But I didn't have to wait till one to see Greg. He rushed into Studio

"It puts us all on our toes to see our boss here," said Pam.

and how mistaken. "I don't see how our Peggy is going to wait two months. Look at her!"

Aunt Carrie glanced and sniffed. "Don't look at me. I think I'm going to cry. And I don't often cry."

It's odd how that simple sentence came back to me two months later when my great-aunt broke down suddenly and declared that she was responsible for the death of that poor naked creature down on the beach.

But even now, I can't condemn my decision to go home again. Any one would have longer for Glennacres as I recalled it. And I longed for Greg Mason, too.

Love's Wages had worked other miracles, but it had not made Greg conscious of me as anything but a segment of the great business of broadcasting. When I saw him at the office he was friendly but casual and generally in a hurry.

As head of radio for Storrs and Weymouth he had endless responsibilities: directors to stimulate shows to sell ratings to watch new business to go after, old business to keep alive, sponsors to satisfy. The "brass hats" of advertising eat when and if they can, generally in groups with conferences going on straight through the meal.

Greg came to work at eleven and usually went on working till two or three the next morning. It certainly left little margin for love.

But advertising agencies are closed all day Saturday in summer. So how about week-ends? Week-ends in Havenhurst?

I had confidence in the old romantic formula: moonlight on the Sound, glamour in the garden, yesterday's shared, tomorrow beckoning. I had confidence in a lot of things I have since learned to distrust.

M36 just before we went on the air and slipped into the control room to explain that he had decided to hear the show. The veteran actors gave an extra good performance. They could look in through the glass front of the control room and see the Storrs and Weymouth head of radio sitting back of the director. Some of the new and untied actors fluffed their lines for the same reason. Pam Drury ignored Greg, but after the show she came into the control room.

"Why don't you do this every day? It puts us all on our toes to see our boss here." Pam lifted those smoke-topaz eyes of hers and smiled with that small secret look which is both sultry and enormously exciting.

I know what that slow, provocative glance means. I can describe it as stage business for a character in the show but I can't duplicate it on my own face. My admirers always think they're complimenting me when they say I look like a nice little apple-cheeked schoolgirl. I've still got my corn-tassel hair and wide blue eyes and a look of believing in Santa Claus. You know—good and wholesome. Not alluring and romantic.

Well, Pam smiled with her air of having secrets with Greg. She moved that slim figure of hers closer to him, as if she were inviting him to take her in his arms. The least he could do was ask her to come to lunch with us.

"I'd love to come along, Greg. Even to Sibboney's. But isn't the extra woman bound to be a nuisance?"

As if she could ever be

Miss Jayne Marie Buck Is Wed To Theodore Tochterman

HULMEVILLE, Aug. 13.—Mr. and Mrs. Elwood W. Buck announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Jayne Marie Buck, to Theodore Tochterman, S 1/C, now home on leave from the U. S. Navy. Seaman Tochterman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tochterman, of Rhawnhurst.

The wedding took place in the rectory of Our Lady of Grace R. C. Church, South Lanthorne, last evening, at eight o'clock.

The bride was attended by Miss Amelia Breeze, of Philadelphia; and Mr. Joseph Morath, Philadelphia, served as best man.

A navy blue ensemble was selected by the former Miss Buck for the occasion, her corsage being of tallisman roses. Miss Breeze was attired in yellow, and also had a corsage of tallisman roses.

A reception was held at the Tochterman home. The nuptial ceremony and reception were attended by several relatives and friends.

Seaman Tochterman and bride are spending their honeymoon in Atlantic City, N. J.

Today's Quiet Moment

(By the Rev. James R. Galley)

Pastor

Bristol Presbyterian Church

We pray thy blessing, O Loving Father, upon all those who have troubled minds and hearts today. Many have trials which are beyond their physical ability to bear. Many have fears which cloud their minds and fill their hearts. Many have sorrows which kill their zeal and deaden their spirit. Help them, O Father, into a closer walk with Thee, that they might see Thy hand in all things, and that they might have the realization that all things work together for good to them that love Thee. So cause us to love Thee that we will know thy goodness in the truest sense. Through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

C'mon, you hepcats, and cut a rug with Laurel and Hardy and their two-man zoot-suit band... as they beat it out eight laughs to the bar in "Jitterbugs," which is coming today to the Grand Theatre.

From advance reports "Jitterbugs" appears to be the best of the Laurel and Hardy side-splitters. Stan and Ollie cover a lot of ground in "Jitterbugs." As the picture opens, they are in the middle of a lonely desert, where they are taken in by a fast-talking slicker who gets them to go into partnership with him.

BRISTOL THEATRE

The landing of Nazi saboteurs from a German submarine on the American coast is an interesting sequence in "I Escaped From the Gestapo," the exciting drama which is now at the Bristol Theatre, with Dean Jagger, John Carradine and Mary Brian in featured roles.

The scenes possibly duplicate the actual landings of such saboteurs last year, and show in detail exactly how they could have been accomplished.

RITZ THEATRE

Judy Garland and clever players of today carry audiences back to the glories of the vaudeville of yesterday, in a vivid romance with the varieties as a glittering background, in "For Me and My Gal," now showing at the Ritz Theatre. The picture serves to introduce to the screen Gene Kelly, New York stage sensation in "Pal Joey," as her latest partner.

Gasoline Men Score 3 to 1
Victory Over Diamond
Team

A PITCHERS' CONTEST

Bragg Allows Three Hits and Hirst Gave Four

The Voltz-Texaco team moved back into a deadlock with the Rohm and Haas team for first place in the Bristol Suburban League by scoring a 3-1 triumph over the Diamond aggregation last evening on the Maple Beach field. The defeat put the Diamond team definitely out of the running for the second half championship.

The contest was a pitcher's duel between "Loggie" Bragg, of the winners, and Dick Hirst, of Diamond. Bragg allowed three hits, two coming in the final inning when Diamond scored its only run. Hirst gave up four hits, three only run. Hirst gave up four hits, three only run. Hirst gave up four hits, three only run.

The bases were run poorly in the contest, five runners being caught either napping or attempting to steal.

The ultimate winners made all their tallies in the first. After Grimes was disposed of, Heftman singled to center and crossed on Black's long two-bagger to the same spot. Bragg hit to Hirst and Black was caught between second and third and tagged out. Cooper singled to right and Stratton was intentionally passed to load the bases. Krames hit to Pappaterra who threw wide to first, Bragg and Cooper scoring and when Stratton attempted to score because the ball was side on the playing field, he was put out. DeRisi to Weiser.

For four frames, Bragg had a no-run, no-hit game in his grasp. Then in the fifth, Hirst singled but did not advance. In the sixth, Pappaterra started the inning with a long triple to left. He scored while Heftman was throwing out Elmer. Baurath kept it up with a single to left but was forced at second by DeRisi's grounder to Grimes. Heftman's attempt at a double-play was wild and DeRisi went to second. Weiser grounded out to end the game.

U. S. COAST GUARD TO PLAY FLEETWINGS

The Fleetwings Arrows are scheduled to tangle bats with the strong U. S. Coast Guards ball team in a rematch tonight, at the Bristol High School field.

In their game with the Guards last week the Arrows were forced to take the short end of a 3-2 decision, but are confident that this evening they can reverse the tables and force the Coast Guards to eat from the bottom of the table.

The War at A Glance

As Axis forces hastily increased their effort to evacuate German and Italian troops to the Italian mainland, anti-aircraft fire at Messina, officially described as "the heaviest in the world," impeded Allied planes engaged in attacking enemy barges, many of which were blown up.

Front-line dispatches said the evacuating Germans ruthlessly pushed aside any Italian troops in

SPORTSMEN'S BRIEFS

The winning trout in the 1943 fishing contest of the Bristol Fish & Game Protective Association was entered by Howard Asay, Bath Road. His entry topped that one of John Johnson's by two ounces. Both fish were caught in the Bushkill Creek, Pike County. Trout season in the Commonwealth closed on July 31st.

Two more hunting days were added to the bear season over last year, although the bag of one per person and two for a hunting party of three or more remains the same as last year, according to the rules of the 1943 hunting season recently established by the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

Big game hunters were reminded of the fact that the sale of deerskins is now permitted and that they should make every effort to channel their deerskins into the various industries which are manufacturing gloves and other leather equipment for the armed forces.

A more liberal fur-bearing animal season was also declared, two weeks having been added to minks, muskrats, and skunks. The season for minks and skunks begins November 19 and ends January 31, 1944. The season on otters, on which no trapping was permitted last year, also extends from November 19 to January 31 in the ratio of 4 per individual per season in 7 counties only. The counties include Lackawanna, Luzerne, Monroe, Pike, Susquehanna, Wayne and Wyoming. Two weeks were added to the muskrat season which begins December 1 and closes January 31. Opossums remain unprotected until September 30, 1944.

Only 22 counties are open for trapping beavers, from February 15 to February 29, with a season limit of 3. Last year the entire state was open. The 22 counties include: Bradford, Butler, Cameron, Carbon, Columbia, Centre, Clearfield, Elk, Jefferson, Lackawanna, Lycoming, Monroe, Montour, Northumberland, Pike, Snyder, Sullivan, Susquehanna, Tioga, Union, Wayne, and Wyoming. No one person shall set or tend, or in any manner operate, more than 10 traps; tags on traps shall be so placed that they will be above the ice or water-line to facilitate identification without disturbing the traps; and pelts must be tagged within ten days after the season. Non-residents may not trap beavers.

For the primary purpose of reducing the fox population in Clarion, Forest, and Warren counties, the Commission authorized the use of snares without springpoles for taking predators in those areas, from December 16 to March 31, 1944.

All trappers and fur dealers are urged to co-operate in the saving of fur-bearing animal furs for the war effort. The Game Commission would like to see last year's results, when 94 tons were salvaged, doubled if possible. Efforts are being made to secure sufficient gas and oil for dealers to increase their collections, both for fur-bearing animals and deerskins.

The War Production Board was reported Tuesday of this week ready to allocate enough materials for the manufacture of 100,000,000 shotgun shells for hunting this fall. This would represent about one-sixth of the output of shells in peacetime years.

This disclosure was made by the office of Senator Rushfield of South Dakota, which said WPA officials had agreed to the program after it was explained that game birds were causing great damage to crops. WPA authorities some time ago said there would be "some ammunition" for hunting but emphasized at that time it would be held to a minimum. Later, it was said in some quarters, a hunter would have to show that he was eliminating pests to secure ammunition.

Fished the Nesheim Creek below the dam at Hulmeville Park Monday evening. The water is extremely low, there being no flow over the dam. Just a few trickles in several spots at the base of the dam.

Tried some promising looking spots with no results, and then fished a small section of fast water further down the stream. A large bluegill took the grasshopper I offered. Tried the same spot again and a small-mouth bass tore viciously into the cricket that was offered. How was just a little over legal size. Upon opening the bluegill I found that he had been feeding chiefly on Japanese beetles. The smallmouth also had a few beetles but his diet appeared to be mainly minnows and grasshoppers.

their path. The evacuation drive was centered on removing crack troops and guns to Italy. Axis troops were told to take with them as much ammunition and arms as they could carry.

In Russia, Soviet forces drove to within five miles of Kharkov northeast of that Ukrainian city while to the south the Germans beat a hasty retreat from Chuguey, Nazi strongpoint 22 miles south of Kharkov, after furious fighting. Sixty-five miles southwest of Kharkov, the Germans threw cadets and engineering detachments into the battle in an attempt to stem the Russian advance toward Kiev and the Dnieper.

In the Solomons, American jungle troops slogged through rain-soaked jungles to tighten the ring around Hairoko harbor, last Japanese pocket of resistance on New Georgia Island. To the west, Allied ground forces before besieged Salamaua in New Guinea engaged Japanese troops in skirmishes and artillery duels. Air activities in the Solomons-New Guinea area was limited by bad weather.
